Comments: With this letter I strongly oppose the logging of Old-grown forests.

It is scientifically proven in a million different ways that forests, in particular old-grown forests, are crucial for keeping the water cycle working, i.e., storing water, filling aquifers and rivers, providing moisture for far-away regions. Old-grown forests are keeping themselves healthy and alive during droughts, are holding soils and their crucial microbiomes. Old-grown forests are the last resorts for a multitude of - often endangered - species. Altogether they are providing ecosystem services that BY FAR surpass any possible "wins" through logging. Once gone, all of these services are gone too and cannot be brought back.

State forests are commons. It is the duty of any law maker not to exploit, but to keep commons in the best possible state in order to serve the needs of their owners. Who are WE, THE PEOPLE.
