I have concerns about trails and maintenance and upkeep and literally everything associated with trails because they need to be studied and designed for their specific location and they represent opportunity for invasive species.

I am really uncomfortable with a blanket policy, which is what I'm anticipating in the wording of a Forest Plan amendment. The agency is traditionally under-staffed and under-funded, even considering the contributions of numerous volunteers, so this appears to be a situation where the widespread and long-term risks outweigh the fleeting, occasional reward.

Would trails be acceptable locations for pesticide usage? All of these finer details need to be carefully addressed, again for the long-term impact, not the near-term.

Thank you.
