Comments: Forest Service:

The Black Hill's natural beauty demands respect and responsible preservation. There is nothing "clean" about uranium mining and mining in general. The damage done to the land, not to mention our water, is still seen hundreds of years later.

Environmental Impact Statements and a firm timeline for "exploration" is the least the Forest Service should require ALL mining operations wanting to plunder the Black Hills natural and historic beauty.

Please reconsider the loose and unclear plans of these mining companies and, at the very least, do "due diligence" to understand the impact these companies will wreak on our home.
