Comments: I oppose repeal of the Roadless Rule. I oppose opening up the Tongass National Forest and other large wilderness areas to intensive exploitation. We have only one planet, and the ability of humans to survive and thrive depends on preserving the ecosystems on earth. The more we damage and exploit the last remaining wilderness areas, the more we will damage ourselves and our our future. There are alternatives to oil, coal, and intensive mining. Develop those alternatives instead, and Keep the Roadless Rule.
