Comments: The revised Tongass Land Management plan needs to reflect multi-use land management that will provide sustainability for fish (foremost salmon, yes and other species as well), wildlife, subsistence and recreation. Timber harvest should be restricted to our well thought out young growth plan, preserving what remains of our old growth forest which is paramount to the health of our forest and the people and animals who live here. Reverting back to timber production as the driving land use is a thinly veiled political move that will benefit the very few over the many. Don't go back, move forward with a progressive and conscientious plan that protects our resources for now and future generations. The Tongass is my home, I would hate to see this reckless administration destroy it.

Thank You, Jane Smith
