Comments: I do not know enough about the details of this project to comment specifically on what you are doing. I hope the people who live near Jardine have a big say in your decision. But I object both to the lack of significant public participation in this decision and to the language of "treat" the forest, as if it was sick and spraying chemicals and cutting trees is what the "patient" requires. Forest health is a useful concept, but when it is used to hide proposed actions that significantly disrupt existing ecosystems it gets in the way of a clear headed understanding of what we are doing.

I do appreciate how easily you have made it for people like me to comment. And I thank you for your service in protecting public lands.
