Comments: The Island of Prince of Wales should be managed to maintain its salmon resources for both the subsistence, recreational and commercial interests primarily for its residents. The wildlife, particularly wolves, deer and bear should be managed as well with the same objectives. Sustainability and rehabilitation should be the objectives. All commercial timber logging and removal operations should be conducted in manners that do not threaten any of its fish and wildlife populations. There are very few true old growth forests left on the Island, particularly in lower elevations they are essential for year round health of the ecosystems and their inhabitants. Action needs to be the priority not just talk.
