Comments: There are many pressures against the natural world. Forests, animals, plants are all threatened by commercial growth. Though Pinecrest is a popular tourist destination, it should be protected by visitors and the state and the area that is so privileged to include it in its natural wonders. Every inch of this area is more fragile than we know. I hope that attention will be brought to the encroaching commercialism, and that people will be mindful of the jewel they have and desire to guard it. Some things you can never get back.
