Comments: Summit county already has a severe lack of fun consistently pitched trails that are actually good for mountain biking. Bakers Tank to Aspen Alley is one of the few that really checks this box to provide a long mostly sustained ride. I worry a reroute, especially one that will increase the length of trail, will include more grade reversals and short uphill than there already are here. The trend of these wider machine built trails is really missing the mark of what provides an enjoyable ride through the woods. I think they have their place but to do that to this trail would be an absolute shame
