Comments: I am writing in strong support of accessible trails for all people - and in equal support of the wildlife and ecosystems those trails pass through. Accessibility is not a threat to wild places. Disconnection is. When people cannot reach forests, rivers, and mountains, they stop caring about them. I urge the Forest Service to pursue trail accessibility with ambition and ecological rigor in equal measure.

Thank you for your passion to preserve nature and to connect people with forests. And, thank you for asking for comments about the development of these two new year-round trails: Aspen Alley and North Barton trails.

Respectfully submitted,
