Comments: Everyone who actually understands forest management knows that this proposal is an incredibly bad idea. This is clear cutting in all but name. This will destroy the habitat for endangered owls, choke the water systems with sawdust, and crush the ground below to prevent new growth. It will increase fire risk in a state already suffering from annual fire seasons. Fire management would better be overseen by goats eating overgrowth.

The project as is would permanently destroy the forest habitat for all of its creatures and totally destroy the beauty that brings in tourism. If I wanted to live in a desolate gray concrete wasteland, I would live in LA. This project should not continue. This project should be abandoned.
