Comments: Logging in the Black Hills, in my opinion is currently at a pace that makes sustainable harvests at risk in the future. Removing all vegetation is not a responsible way to manage this area. Over logging and thinning will result in the opposite effect of the increased timber production now asked for by the administration, the results will be less timber in the future. Clearing all vegetation may actually increase wildfire risk. The underbrush and grasses that will take over these sites, will burn more rapidly and spread quickly. I urge you to reconsider your management plan.
