Comments: I feel that there are better methods within the force than to create/piles and burn them creating air pollution and global warning due to increase carbon.

Several members of my family, including myself suffer from asthma. If you've at all paid attention to what's going on in the west right now with all the fires this is reason we don't need any more air pollution. In addition we have a shrinking great Salt Lake, which is now 54% smaller than it should be, we suffer from dust pollution car pollution inversions and we don't need any more prescribed burns or whatever it is. You're planning on doing in the forest.

There's must be a more scientific method to remove deadwood or thin the forest then to stock it up and burn it. What you're planning to do in such close proximity to a major metropolitan area is malpractice and unconscionable. Please stop the progress of this project and bring in experts to determine the safest method to manage the forest for the humans and the wildlife that depend on it and depend on the clean air that it produce says by putting oxygen back into the air.
