Comments: The Willamette National Forest matters to me. I visit the Willamette National Forest several times a year, mostly for hiking, occasionally for camping. What matters most: the biodiversity and complexity of this forest, with streams, wildflowers, mixed small and large trees of many species, is a rich ecosystem so different from the dry ecosystem I live in. If this goes through, this project is another small step that combined with other projects is changing this public national forest into a tree farm.
