Comments: I urge the Forest Service to reject this plan.

A plan that could triple logging on Malheur, Ochoco, Umatilla, and Wallowa-Whitman National Forests is a terrible idea. Current management on these forests must be strengthened, not weakened, as this proposal would do.

Any forest plan must do the following:

- Protect mature and old-growth forests
- Protect forests providing critical wildlife habitat.
- Retain safeguards for large trees and roadless areas.
- Resist political, and corporate, pressure and base management on the best available science
- Protect communities without sacrificing the integrity, conservation value, and beauty of our public lands
