Comments: We prefer the first alternative for the following reasons:

- 1) Access to the area. We were not notified of an evacuation of the area during the Grizzly Creek fire, while we were in the campground. That experience really highlighted the fact that there is only one road out. Increasing usage in the area just makes it more dangerous.
- 2) Access to many areas around the lake have already been limited.
- 3) It is a beautiful lake, and there is no need to overdevelop the area.
- 4) I have been hunting this area for 30 years. More people will disrupt the wildlife.
- 5) By changing the campground, and putting it under control of the state, it will become very difficult to get a campsite due to reservation rules.
