Comments: The Recreation Specialist Report has the feeling of a college term paper written by a smart person who got a late start. It uses a boilerplate outline and touches all the obligatory high points in Relevant Laws and Regulations.

It lays out a methodology having three Resource Indicators and Measures, then does a poor job of collecting them, and provides nothing that looks like analysis.

The specialist attempts to describe the Gold Creek and Cabin Creek Sno-Parks in detail, and gets it wrong by using out-of-date information. Up-to-date information is available from the Washington State Parks Winter Recreation Program in the form of downloadable maps.
