Comments: I visit New Mexico yearly to enjoy the beautiful scenery, explore the art and cultural sites, visit the people and participate in the culinary experiences. This state is near and dear to my heart so I must post a comment on this proposed uranium mine. For your review of whether this project should go forward, I implore you to consider what pumping millions of gallons of precious groundwater every day would do to wells, springs and aquifers. And examine the risks of radon exposure as well as account for the uranium contamination already sitting across this landscape that has not been abated. I also want to know exactly which protections for water, tribes and cultural resources would have to be waived or changed for this mine. I don't believe the risk to the people, animals and landscape will be worth the risk as they are more valuable than money.
