I am asking that the proposed ski-lift expansion be reconsidered in a way that protects the existing snowmobile trails and access to the area.

I was a snowmobile guide at Brian Head for two years, and that experience means a lot to me. Being a guide wasn't just a job-it was something I genuinely loved. I had the opportunity to share my passion for snowmobiling with people from all over and show them the beautiful trails and scenery that make this area so special.

Guiding was also an important source of income for me. There are other people who rely on snowmobiling and the businesses surrounding it for their livelihoods as well.

I understand that Brian Head wants to grow and improve, and I am not against development. I just don't believe that development should come at the expense of established snowmobile access and the experiences that people have built their lives and businesses around.

The trails aren't just lines on a map. They are places where people make memories, businesses earn a living, and people get to experience the mountains in a completely different way.

I hope the decision-makers will seriously consider the impact this expansion could have on snowmobilers, guides, businesses, employees, and families who enjoy this area every winter. I want to see Brian Head continue to grow while still preserving the snowmobile access that has meant so much to me and so many others.

Thank you for taking my comment into consideration.
