Comments: Herbert Glacier Cabin

In a world where we see our most valued public lands and buildings appear to be for sale to the bidder with the most influence. USFS can put it's thumb on the scale and press forward into the future with a Herbert Glacier Cabin. Striking a balance between raw wilderness and roadside accessibility and well situated to complement the existing, if precarious, existence of other cabins in the region. Herbert Glacier Cabin can be a touchstone in the system of public ownership, access and enjoyment. I would recommend...not skimping on this cabin. Make it worthy of our reverence for these lands, institutions, and people who build and maintain them. As our local population of retirees grows, so to does the need for cabins like this one. We know how important it is to have access to wild places. As our institutions are cut without audit or review and our economic well being upended with the unproven promises of a better future. Let this cabin be a beacon of hope, a place of renewal and contemplation. We can still do great things.
